

CONOCO-PHILLIPS SUPPORTS AREA SOLID WASTE PROGRAM

ConocoPhillips has contributed $10,000 in support of the Solid Waste Institute of Northeast Oklahoma, a regional nonprofit organization promoting improvements in community solid waste management programs.

The funds will be used by the Institute to support the organization's efforts to assist community cleanup activities, special waste collections, and public education projects to reduce littering and roadside dumping. Headquartered in Tahlequah, the Institute serves local governments and other public entities in a 14-county service region in northeast Oklahoma.

"ConocoPhillips has a strong history of charitable giving for environmental programs and we're extremely grateful for their support of our efforts to sustain clean and healthy communities by promoting environmentally responsible waste management practices here in northeast Oklahoma" said Ken Purdy, the organization's program director.
